NEW DEPARTURE IN FORGING OF WILLS.

EX-CONVICTS BRAVERY AT ANTWERP SIEGE.

Novelist in search of a plot in which i forged will plays a part might find | longer required. 9 material in a case that came recently before, Mr. Justice Durling at the Central Criminal Court.

Mr. R. D. Muir, in opening the cuse for the Director of Public Prosecutions. said it was out of the ordinary run of forged will cases, inasmuch as the will was forged not for the purpose of obtaining the property of the testatrix, but with the object of "putting in off-" on some moneylender and borrowing manay on it. "So far as I know," said counsel, that is a new departure in the forging of wills."

"The accused were Henry Vaughan (72) William Henry Bruce (33) . They were indicted for forging and uttering document purporting to be the last wi and testament of Jane Augusta Leete Vaughan was also charged with forging and attering cheques for £540 and £580 and a bill of exchange for £4,500 on the London City and Midland Bank, prisoners pleaded guilty to making fals statements in connection with obtaining probate of the will, and Vaughan pleaded guilty to the uttering and to the charge of attempting to obtain 24,900 by Malse

The case was in the list last week, but it was then reported to the judge that Vaughan had attempted to commit suicide in Brixton Prison by opening a vein in

ment, said the prisoners' scheme was a very ingenious one. Miss Jane Augusta Lecte: a single woman, aged 62, died ir September last, and that fact enabled the accused to get a death certificate, which was the first essential in the contemplated fraud. She left a will, which was not proved, because she had no property . any value to leave. That was the second

Having forged the will, under which two of Miss Leete's nephews, who had no existence, were supposed to benefitone to the extent of £2,000 in War Losu scrip-a solicitor-was approached with the view of having the will proved.

This was done by another of the conspirators-for, said counsel, there were others in 'the case—and this person produced the £80 necessary for obtaining

The next step was to approach a firm of moneylenders and ask for a loan of £1,800 on the security of the £2,000 legacy. The negotiations proceeded smoothly, and Bruce, in the name of Birch, was upon the point of signing the necessary documents, when the solicito Fisher ... demanded to see the War Loan scrip. Bruce at once put the pen down.

BOLICITOR'S BUNPICTONS. The solution became suspicious, and Churches) ... vas instituted which revealed the fraud.

Mr. Goddard, for the banks concerned, by E. J. Eitel) 20 took up the story, and told how Vaughan made the acquaintance of a young lady employed as a clerk at a West-end hotel He secured war impressions of keys, and the signatures of visitors who were in the habit of paying their accounts by cheque. Next he secured thereervices of a Miss Ottway as secretary, and, in the name of Sidney Lee, obtained a cheque book from the Union of London and Smiths Bank. He then made out two cheques for £540 each, and instructed Miss Ottway to pay one of them (drawn on the London and Provincial Bank) into the account, and to present the other one for payment.

The cushier was entirely deceived, and, thinking Mr. Lee was obliging a friend by putting in a cheque for him, paid the money out. Both cheques were forgeries, Next morning Miss Ottway received through the post a £1 Treasury note and an intimation that her services were no

A SMART TOUNG LADY. Feuring that her services had been used for some "illegal purpose, whe communicated at once with the police, and owing to the promptness and courage with which she acted. Vaughan was arrested. In the case of the London and Provincial Bank, where a sum of £580 was involved, the fraud was -worked in precisely the same way, the innocent agent used in this case being a wounded French soldier invalided out of the army. who had come, to this country to find work. In this case, however, the money was not obtained from the bank.

Inspector Hugh McLean, of the City police, proved a long list of convictions against the men for crimes of a serious nature committed in different parts of this country, Paris, and America. -- At-the-time when Antwerp was bornbarded by the Germans both men were in the gaol there, and on the day before the Germans entered they, with all the other prisoners, were released, and told to find their own safety.

Mr. G. W. S. Jones, who defended, read a long letter from the Rev. Cyril Harrison, Anglican Chaplain at the Antwerp gaol, in which he stated that the two prisoners acted with great bravery during the bombardment of Antwerp. and, but for their heroic and devoted SINGAPORE:" Messre Borneo Co. behaviour, while shells were falling about them: he doubted whether he and his Mr. Muir, proceeding with his state- wife would have escaped from Antwerp.

> WHO WAS THE FOLGER? Mr. Justice Darling, in passing sentence, said there was only one bright spot in the case against the men, and that was what came out in the chaplain's letter. He was not surprised exactly, because if they had not a good deal of nerve they could not possibly have committed the complicated crimes which they had been for years in the habit of committing." The only doubt he had was whether he ought not to pass sentence of penal servitude, for life. The sentence of the Court was Electric Facial Massage with that Bruce went to penal servitude for 14 years, and Vaughan to seven years' penal servivide, and in passing this sentence.

he had taken his see into secount. Mr. Justice Darling later had the men Hovels, Magazines, brought back into the dock, and told them that the police knew very well who the forger was and that they could give very veluable evidence which would lead to the conviction of that person,

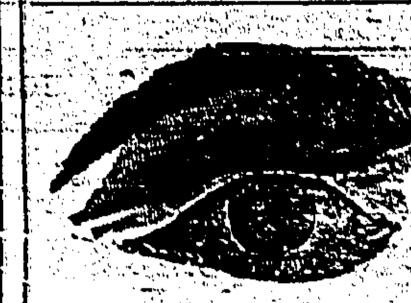

If they were instrumental in bringing this man to justice, they might perition the Home Secretary for a remission of s considerable part of their sentences, and he (the judge) would support them.

On and January she left Woosung at 8.10 RESCUE "OF WHALER'S CREW IN .m.: she passed the Bell Buoy at 17.10 a.m. and was then put on her course. On 21th January about 7 a.m. she was helpless, lying at the mercy of the winds and waves, with her fires extinguished; In that condition she lay till she was salved by the as. Javary: and she reached Woosung again on the evening of 27th January. Tugs brought her upthe river and she was placed in the International Dock on the morning of 28th January : she was taken out of that Dock the following morning and after her cargo had been discharged, she was placed in the Yangtszepoo Dock. a crew of six mon, was driven by the reports made by Captain Bayes-Davy which have been filed in this case (Ex. 1 and 4). Cargo had been jettisoned from the after hold and cargo in both fore and after holds had been changed by water. Under these circumstances the plaintiffs began these proceedings. asking for a declaration that the steamer was unseaworthy and that the defendants were liable to the plaintiffs as set out in the Statement of Claim. The defendants denied the unseaworthiness of the ship and also pleaded the Bills of with her crew lying helpless in the boat. Lading. At the trial it was agreed that having given up all hope of being rescued. I should now only decide the one question of unserworthiness, leaving over the other questions raised in the case. Now a shipowner warrants the seaworthiness of his by a search party with a rope. This rope ship; that is that she is reasonably fit for the voyage to be undertaken. It a question of fact in each case and unseaworthiness may be due to the condition of the ship, her lack of men or had been rescued, this exhausting and equipment, or any other cause that dangerous task in the deep mud being

In this case therefore it, lies upon the plaintiffs to prove that this ship was one afterwards died from the effects of not reasonably fit to take a cargo of exposure. gunnies, wax, etc., from Shanghai to Vladivostock in January 1916. And to prove this the plaintiffs point to the general condition of the ship, as well as to specific defects. In the main the condition of the ship is not in dispute; though of course individual defences (are : e.g. the existence of broken rivets. But it is to be remembered that what I have to decide is not the condition of the ship when she was back in Shanghai, but her condition when she started on this voyage. No doubt her condition as described on her return helps to the correct ascertainment of her condition when before the Court. I put myself as far as possible in the position of a jury on this question of fact and I find uncontradicted that there were a large number of very badly wasted plates and frames in the ship that there was a fracture in the stringer angle : that there were holes in the bulkhead : that the hand pumps were defective: that one wasted plate was budly fractured in the storm. In addition I. have such evidence as that the ship was generally in a neglected condition : that the after peak was in a deploruble condition. He was an honoured guest at the German Embassy, he had more than one conversation with Lord Haldane-with whose at titude he declared himself sadly disappointed-and returned to Germany to make a report to the Emperor. It is possible that Schiemann's information upon the imminence of civil war in Ireland may have helped to determine the German Emperors decision to drive Austria into war with Serbis. In any case, there is good authority for stating that before the German Emperor disputched towards the middle of July, 1914, the letter which to sanction the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum to Serbin, he showed the letter

WE think the community will war, to the support of a special We shall all know now the minimum requirements of the local Fund in aid of War Charities. We are Fund? For this purpose we append the sum of £10,000 a year for a at home on various incomes under hospital in London for officers and the new scale :men of the Royal Flying Corps; and we must also provide funds, to the extent of about 32,000 a month, for the continuance of the valuable work which is being done by the women of Hongkong for the war hospitals and the assistance of the families of our soldiers and sailors. There must be no slackening of effort. in this direction while the war continues. A further sum of about $2,000 a year is required to supplement the Regimental Funds of the local garrison. We are quite sure that, is suggestion which will be welcomed by all who are acquainted with the need for this assistance. As H. E. THE GOVERNOR remarked in his address at the meeting of Committee, the war has introduced novel elements in the garrison especially in the nature of a Territorial Battalion, composed of men who have left their civil employments for the duration of the war at great pecuniary sacrifice. Everybody knows that the soldier's pay is not on a lavish scale, and in the case of the territorial troops who have family ties at home, the men after they have yesterday that H.E. In cotton goods the clearing-out | the entire German people from the palace increasing but the imports decreasing, merely regard the German colonies as money may be made, or where the native the exports of tin showed a rise both in races may be sucked dry. This is the Briton's way with his foreign possessions. For the German his colonies, are lands of fable, shimmering in the magic banner of Kultun and humanity.

BEFORE THE WAR.

"We wonder if this nauseous stuff will impose on the readers of the "Fremdenblatt." Before the war the strongest political party in the country made no secret of their contempt for the "Colonial Empire," mocked at the efforts made to I galvanise" trade with the colonies, spoke of the "sand box" (South-west Africa), of the "lever nests" (East Africa and Togo), and of the "pestilent swamp" (Cameroon). We know, further, that before the war there were no signs of the colonies exercising a "potent attrazfion" on the German youth, and that high bonuses and bribes were vainly offered to young men and women to Hongkong, the Japanese authorities emigrate to the sand boxes, fever nests, despatched two Marine Court officials to and swamps of Africa. Dr. Carl Peters, and Chancellor Leist. Germany itself rang with the shame of Saki, First Officer, and other members it all. What colonising country has a of the crew, will take place in Tokio blacker record than Germany in the supply of trade gin to native African races? What country over suppressed a native rising with a barbarism comparable with that exercised by General von Troths on the unfortunate Hereros! We recall a speech in the Reichsteg in which this hero defended the employment of the

Ovambo tribesmen in slaughtering the "ORDER AND RIGHTEOUSNESS." The Fremdenblate sketches the lofty and humanitarian methods employed by Germany in acquiring her African possessions, relying on its readers' defeutive memories of the trickery employed by Bismarck in his negotiations with Lord Granville. We are told that the colonies have become the children of Germany's bosom. We are told that he whose happy eyes have once beheld the German colonies will never forget the pride, the love of those men to whom has been entrusted the work of Kultur in those regions. Whether in tropical Africa or in the South Seas, he will see in German colonies the stamp of colonies with those of other nations he will be impressed with the difference in handling the natives, the difference in order, punctuality, and righteousness."

PRESENT SITUATION INSPIRING

London, June 15.

Mr Asquith, in the course of a speech to his constitutents at Ladybank (Fifeshire) paid a tribute to the late-Lord Kitchener's boundless self-devotion and service to his country. A survey of the present situation, he said, was inspiring. The Russian advance was one of the most brilliant feats of the war, the indomitable resist ance of the Italians to the Austrian onslaught was daily becoming more effective, and nothing could exceed the valour of the French at Verdun. The co-operation of the Allies was also growing more complete, and their material and economic resources might. well prove one of the deciding factors in the struggle. The battle of Jutland had established our sea command more firmly and unshakably. British assistance, Mr. Asquith said had been offered to Coneral Joffre, and

We append a selection of the figures.

They are supplied by the Co-operative Wholesale Society, and are wholesale, not retail, prices. They are, moreover, prices at port; that is to say, the whole-sale prices of the goods before railway carriage to inlund centres has been paid.

The following four tables show the prices in pence per lb of the articles named in the years indicated the 1916 figures being the average prices for the

LITTLE "MOTHERS."

NEW IDEAS FOR WELFARE OF THE CHILD,

A model day nursery excited the the recent monarchical movement, interest of Princess Arthur of Connaught at the Child Life Exhibition which she opened recently at the Institute of Hygiene in Devonshire-street, London W.. The creche is very much where babies are left to the care of competent nurses while their mothers are at work. The exhibition illustrated child welfare in all its phases. One delightful little picture shows quite small children playing the part of little mothers. They dress and undress baby (really a big doll) do the bathing, the powdering, and all the other things that a baby toilet requires. .In another room children preside over the gas cooker, and make all sorts the of dainty dishes. Hay-box cookery, done by children, is shown to be very simple and economical. Lectures on various subjects of interest to mothers, Scotch Whisky cinematograph pictures, feucing dis-plays, a children's band composed of small students from the Royal Academy of Music and demonstrations of physical excercises by children are other attractive features of the exhibition.

BUSY 75'S.

So much has been written of the French 75's that it may seem superfluous even to mention them, but; think that no one who has seen these wonderful little guns in action can resist inging their praises. It is extraordinary that a piece of incehanism should play such an enormous part in world history as this has done, and it seems incongruous that an engine of destruction should be helping to save France and the civilization of the West. Yet every officer with whom Lhave talked tells me that it was these little guns which saved the battle of the Marne, and the general opinion seems to be that Verdun, too owes its salvation to the swarms of little stinging bees that stung the German columns to death on the bloody slopes of that now famous battlefield.

When I asked the General to be shown a battery of 75's every face in the group of officers beamed. Winding through the woods was a tiny trail, and this followed until we emerged into a little clearing. 'A look disclosed the hiding place of a buttery. I was escorted by the young captain in tharge into the nest of one of these guns, Squatted complicently on its hunches, its aleri little nose peered expectantly out of a custain of brush. If there ever was a weapon which had a personality of writings in prose and verse. it is surely this gun. Other field guns seem to me to be cynical and sinister, but this guil, like the French themselves, has nothing malevolent or morose about it. It is serious, to be sure, but its whole atmosphere is one of cheerful readiness to serve. Its killing is a part of its impersonal duty, as in deed one feels to be the case with the clean, gentlemanly soldiers of France. They kill to save France, not because they have the lust of slaughter. Their gun is as far in its personal character from the sullen, sulky, German fieldpiece as is the bright-eyed, vivacious Frenchman from the heavy and stolid German infantryman.

o · WONDERFUL FIRING. .

The captain showed me the details of the wonderful mechanism and explained the battery was accustomed to have a of their crime, and Mrs. MacDonagh little practice against the enemy, and I left a widow with a boy of three and a have never in war seen anything more girl of 18 months to support. sharp, definit little barks.

Of Miss Grace Gifford I have learned a few particulars from a member of her family. She is a handsome young woman, 28 years of age, one of four daughters of Frederick Gifford, & Duhim solicitor, who has retired from practice owing to ill-health. She was given a good education, and, developing a taste for art, went through a course of training at the Slade Art School in London. Wayward and headstrong by nature. she came, several years ago, under the influence of Countess Markievicz and. much against the wishes of her parents. associated herself with the Sinn Fein

One of her sisters, Miss Muriel Gifford also came into contact with the leaders of the party, and four years ago married Thomas MacDonagh, an M.A., of the National University, a tutor in English literature at the University College, and the system of the recoil, sights, and an intimate friend, of P.
